Did You Know?

A survey of 1,000 K-12 teachers found that high school teachers on average assign about 3.5 hours of homework each week. For high school students who typically have five classes with different teachers, that could mean as much as 17.5 hours each week. By comparison, the survey found middle school teachers assign about 3.2 hours of homework each week and kindergarten through fifth grade teachers assign about 2.9 hours each week.

Elementary & Middle School Tips & Tricks

Wouldn't it be great if children and parents knew exactly what to expect when students entered a new school? That's where our Tips and Tricks guides come in. They tackle tough questions that every parent and student have; like how to transition into a new environment, building healthy parent-teacher relationships, homework support and more! These titles are great for teachers too, as a handy reference to support parents and answer their questions, or as a handout at open house and parent-teacher conferences.
